1.The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 42 and 43 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Smith et al for reasons of record as set forth in the previous action.

2.Applicant's arguments filed June 30, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant continues to make distinctions between the instant "molding" process and that shown in the references, in this case the method of Smith et al. However, Smith et al embosses the thin film which becomes the data layer and this is then laminated to a carrier, which is also made of (presumably molded) plastic. It is respectfully submitted that the operations in Smith et al would be at least broadly readable, and hence encompassing, the instant term "molding" as pertaining to the instant compact disc. No other language is set forth in the claims differentiating the instant process from that of Smith et al and hence applicant's arguments directed thereto are simply not commensurate in scope with the claims. Whatever differences there are between the instant "molding" and the "thin-film system" of Smith et al certainly are not in the claims. For instance, at the bottom of page 7 of the arguments, applicant states that there is no expectation of success for injection molding a non-round disk in Smith et al. However, the term "injection" appears nowhere in the claims. The aspect of making the data portion with arcuate peripheries has already been addressed. While such is not explicitly taught in the applied reference, it is submitted that such would have been an obvious feature in the method of Smith et al for reasons already noted.

3.THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
